191091370186 Prince Charles and Prince William Royal Rivals or Father and Son? 2007

"The death of a mother, the alienation of a wife plus a lover in the background - these striking events somehow have not broken the love of these two men - father and son.This original program asks how Charles and William have stayed so visibly fond of each other. A generous son to his father and a great role model for his brother, William was also always an enormous comfort for his mother. Very different people, father and son may yet become rivals as public opinion builds against Charles and Camilla becoming King and Queen. Unlike Charles, William is a man of his time, and perhaps that is where the rivalry could emerge - what sort of image should the King have in an increasingly modern and multicultural Britain? This DVD features English subtitles for the deaf and hearing-impaired." Prince William;Prince Charles real person behind the photogenic royal icon? This probing and fascinating documentary special explores the person beyond the public image. This is the story of a young man whose face is exposed on magazine covers and in tabloids; a face without a place to hide, who most private expressions photographers lurk to capture. This DVD features English subtitles for the deaf and hearing-impaired." Prince William;Prince Harry Windsor;Princess Diana;Prince Charles;Camilla Parker-Bowles

191091370216 Queen Elizabeth II A Lifetime of Service 2013 "Elizabeth II: the sixth queen

regnant and 63rd sovereign of Britain. She can trace her ancestry beyond the Hanoverians, Stuarts, Tudors, Plantagenets and Normans, back to the Saxon kings of the Dark Ages. Her long reign has seen astonishing social changes in Britain and the world. When Elizabeth came to the throne in 1952, divorcees were still banned from the Royal Enclosure at Ascot. Since then, her sister and three of her own children were divorced. The Royal Family members are no longer solidly royal or aristocratic; their number has swelled in recent times with young men and women from more humble backgrounds. This DVD features English subtitles for the deaf and hearing-impaired." Queen Elizabeth II

191091371244 H.M. The Queen Her True Story 2002 "With extensive coverage of the early years of Elizabeth's life, this is an updated look at the life of Britain's monarch. When Elizabeth became Queen, the British Empire was turning into a Commonwealth. After the Second World War and the new Labour Government, Britain was changing fast. Her family has been surrounded by gossip, though her own long marriage to Philip has largely escaped this. The Queen's stability and continuity has allowed Britain to shed an empire and create a new and prosperous identity quite against all the odds and expectations of most leading commentators. From Churchill to Blair, and presiding over a country immeasurably different since the start of her reign, Queen Elizabeth's achievement can now be seen. This DVD features English subtitles for the deaf and hearing-impaired." Queen Elizabeth II

However, the locals' way of life is under threat from a large corporate retail machine headed up by a human monster named Bennett Campbell who wants to buy land for a new development. After discovering a mysterious crate of herbal tea washed up on shore, Jackson and his friend Russell hatch a plan to sell the tea and save the village. 191091384343 The Drew: No Excuse, Just Produce 2015 "The predominantly African-American community of South Central Los Angeles carries the burdens of crime, poverty, an escalating gang population and dwindling opportunities for its youth. In response, a young man named Alvin Willis formed a six-team competitive basketball league at Charles Drew Junior High School. It was an outlet for himself and his friends. It became known as the Drew League. Or, more affectionately, "The Drew." Its motto, "No excuse, just produce." More than just a place to play ball, the Drew League provided a safe haven for kids and young men seeking refuge from the negative influences around them. The Drew quickly became neutral ground. Whatever gang affiliations players arrived with were left at the gym doors. Whatever violence occurred outside its walls never penetrated. The residents of South Central nurtured this local treasure as a counterweight, helping balance the scales against darker paths more easily found. In 1983, after more than a decade in charge, Willis stepped down as commissioner, passing the torch to his longtime protege, Dino Smiley. A resident of South Central himself, Smiley grew up around The Drew, starting by doing every odd job from waterboy to scorekeeping. Eventually he would run a team of his own. Over the next 30 years, The Drew persevered through social, logistical and financial instability, a testament to force of will and the power of family. Dino's own, including his wife and children and the extended family that formed around the league. Fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, cousins -- whole families were woven into the tapestry of the league as players, fans, or volunteers. Still, the pressures of running the league took their toll. Year after year, it became tougher to consistently find the funding and resources necessary to make the league work, and by 2010, Dino had to consider shutting it down. That was, until the NBA unintentionally provided The Drew its greatest opportunity. During the lockout of 2011, the Association's best pros needed a place to stay sharp. Having long served as a talent incubator for local pros from Byron Scott to Baron Davis and James Harden, The Drew threw open its doors to the greatest basketball talent in the world, as Kevin Durant, LeBron James and Kobe Bryant joined dozens of peers, hooping in South Central. All eyes were on Los Angeles, and, as it had for decades, The Drew produced. "The Drew:

No Excuse, Just Produce"" documents the unlikely story of a Los Angeles institution, celebrating the value of basketball, persistence, loyalty, family, and above all, community. The power of sports meets the power of people. Directed by Baron Davis and Chad Gordon. Produced by Baron Davis, Ali Brown, Chad Gordon, Paul Hunter, Stefan Sonnenfeld, Erikka Yancy and Gus Roxburgh. This DVD features English subtitles for the deaf and hearing-impaired and bonus features including BD Talks Drew, Free Throw, LeBron Shows Up, Metta Shows Up, Swag Champ, Hey You, The Way Things Were along with the official ""The Drew: No Excuse, Just Produce"" trailer." 191091415191 24x36: A Movie About Movie Posters 2016 ""24x36: A Movie About Movie Posters"" is a documentary that explores the world of illustrated movie poster art; the artists who create it, companies and studios that commission it, galleries that display it and collectors and fans who hang it. Through interviews with a number of key art personalities from the '70s and '80s, as well as many modern, alternative poster artists -

""24x36"" aims to answer the questions: What happened to the illustrated movie poster? Where did it disappear to and why? In the mid 2000s, filling the void left behind by Hollywood's abandonment of illustrated movie posters, independent artists and galleries began selling limited edition screenprinted posters. Janson Media Releases "the Fix"

46032058499 The Fix DVD-5 2014 "The Fix is a tale of recovery and redemption that paints a portrait of life after heroin addiction in the Bronx. Junior, a young father trying to turn his life around after years of heroin addiction, joins forces with a group of fellow hepatitis-C-infected former junkies in the Bronx to fight the disease in their community. Knitting personal narratives together with a profile of innovative programs at a methadone clinic, the film explores the concept of storytelling as an instrument of change and gives a powerful voice to marginalized members of society. Ultimately a very personal story of redemption and hope, The Fix puts a human face on addiction and disease with sensitivity and grace.

Junior lives in a homeless shelter with his wife and young daughter and has recently gotten clean after 20 years of addiction, jail, and violence. Like most injection drug users, Junior has contracted hepatitis C, a chronic disease that will, left untreated, cut short his life. Traumatized by his past but determined to change, he seeks treatment for his addiction at a methadone clinic in the Bronx, where he is offered a grueling, year-long hepatitis C treatment that could potentially save his life. We learn that Junior has not seen his oldest daughter in ten years, having lost custody of her because of his heroin addiction. Overcome with guilt and regret, he is now determined not to repeat history with his second child. Despite severe side effects from the treatment, he pushes forward. Gradually gaining momentum in his recovery, Junior trains as a peer educator at his clinic and joins forces with other former junkies to fight the hepatitis C epidemic in the Bronx. Charged with helping other addicts, Junior and the others begin to feel a sense of purpose in their own lives. As part of their training, the peer educators participate in a storytelling workshop conducted by The Moth, an award-winning non-profit dedicated to the art of telling true stories live. Junior finds his voice and begins to transform into a powerful leader and storyteller. In the face of treatment-induced memory loss and a fear of failure, he takes to the stage at events from downtown Manhattan to Governor's Hall at the New York State capitol. With a sense of spiritual and physical renewal, Junior improbably reunites with his first daughter and vows to be the positive paternal presence his family needs going forward. Because of his hepatitis C cure, he now has the time that he needs." Laura Naylor
